

Est.
1841

YORK
ST JOHN
UNIVERSITY

Swain, Spencer (2022) Routledge Book
Launch Event: Leisure and Forced Migration. In: Routledge Book
Launch: Leisure and Forced Migration, 7th July 2022, Online.

Downloaded from: <https://ray.yorks.ac.uk/id/eprint/6482/>

Research at York St John (RaY) is an institutional repository. It supports the principles of open access by making the research outputs of the University available in digital form. Copyright of the items stored in RaY reside with the authors and/or other copyright owners. Users may access full text items free of charge, and may download a copy for private study or non-commercial research. For further reuse terms, see licence terms governing individual outputs. Institutional Repository Policy Statement

RaY

Research at the University of York St John

For more information please contact RaY at ray@yorks.ac.uk

Est.
1841

YORK
ST JOHN
UNIVERSITY

Voices from the margins: Khat-chewing, devotional leisure and ambivalence in the British-Somali diaspora

Dr Spencer Swain York St John University

Introduction

- Khat-chewing and its relationship with Somali culture.
- Liquid modernity and devotional leisure.
- Research methods.
- Khat-chewing as a form of devotional leisure
- Khat-chewing, leisure and cultural dissonance
  - the voices of Somali women
  - Younger – 2nd generation migrants

What is Khat? And what is khat-chewing?

- Khat (Catha Edulis)
  - Shrub like narcotic chewed in East Africa and the Southern Arabian Peninsula. (Carrier, 2007)
  - Toxicology reports – as potent as coffee (Kalix, 1987; Swain, 2017)
  - Users peel khat sticks and place the contents into the side of their mouth.
  - Chewing releases dopamine – mild feeling of euphoria – seen to aid conversation (Anderson et al., 2007)
- Complex – khat not grown in Somaliland – instead Kenya and Ethiopia.
- Emerged in the 15th century associated with tribal and religious elites. (Swain, 2021)
- Past 200 years goat herders chewing while tending their flock – blurring between leisure and work (Hansen, 2008)

Khat-Chewing in Somali Culture

- Growth in khat use at the beginning of the 20th century
  - Due infrastructure developments khat-chewing soars. (Abdullahi, 2001)
  - Caught the attention of the British – saw Somaliland as a protectorate since 1864.
  - British attempt to ban, leads to backlash and subsequent independence in 1960.
- Khat use prominent in the North.
  - Came under scrutiny from Siad Barre – dictator.
  - Civil War late 1980s.
  - Many flee – Britain popular destination (Valentine et al., 2009)

Khat-chewing: Cultural Dynamics?

- Patriarchal
  - Within Somali Culture (Harris, 2005)
- Linked with cultural identity (masculinity/age)
  - Central in establishing and maintaining patriarchal and patrilineal hierarchies (Fangen, 2006)
- Different types – Mirra (Kenya) or Harari (Ethiopia) – (Swain, 2018; 2021)
- Banned by British Government
  - Khat ban (2014)
- Chewed in the mafrish (khat house); sessions 6 hours to 2 days in lengths. (Thomas and Williams, 2013)

Devotional Leisure and Liquid Modernity

- Link between khat-chewing and the notion of devotional leisure.
- Liquid modernity
  - Transition in the context of society – production based to consumer based (Bauman, 2000; 2006)
  - Shaped by deregulation of financial markets and the scaling back of the welfare state.
  - Increased individualisation – leading to uncertainty and fear amongst the population (Bauman, 2005; Blackshaw, 2016; Swain, 2017; 2019)
  - Particularly amongst flawed consumers – those without the financial means to consume – Somali refugees.
- Devotional leisure
  - Leisure can be used to create a sense of order – value sphere.
  - Central in developing a sense of identity, community and broader values.
  - Site of sanctuary from a fluid ever changing world.
  - Marginalised groups use of traditional cultural/leisure activities (Blackshaw, 2016; 2018)

The Research Focus

- Ethnographic research on khat-chewing
  - 35 un-structured interviews.
  - 18 months of participant observations.
  - 2nd largest Somali community in the UK.

- Complexities
  - Positionality – insider/outsider debate (Carrington, 2008; Fletcher, 2013).
  - Ethical Issues surrounding legality, anonymity (Bucerius, 2013); anti-khat groups.

Khat-Chewing and Devotional Leisure

- Khat-chewing huge symbolic status in Somali culture.
  - Seen as a cultural norm.
  - Central part of Somali masculine identity
- Allowed older and middle-aged men to create a positive sense of identity.
  - Negate the effects of feeling marginalised in British society.
- Create a sense of togetherness.
  - With others experiencing similar anxieties.
  - Diasporic connection with Somaliland.
- Devotional leisure – khat-chewing used to create a value sphere
  - Built on a positive identity; feeling of community; and connection with a broader diasporic consciousness.

Khat-Chewing and Ambivalence

- Khat-chewing seen as problematic, particularly amongst British-Somali women
  - Men spend time away from family.
  - Khat linked to unemployment.
  - Domestic abuse.
- Mafrish perceived as a space to hide from the changing social environment of the diaspora.
  - Increase voice for women in liberal democracies.
  - Youth forging syncretic identities.
- Khat-chewing linked to a site of escapism from changing realities in the diaspora.

Conclusion

Khat-chewing can be interpreted as a form of devotional leisure.

- Helps middle and older aged men create a value sphere.
- Shaping identity, community and broader diasporic consciousness.

However, khat-chewing also a site of division.

- Lack of help in the domestic sphere.
- Link to lack of integration within British society.
- Clash with emerging identities – syncretic identities of the youth.

Khat-chewing divides the community it seeks to unite.

- Site of cultural dissonance.
- Such leisure serves to further divide khat users from others in their community.

Reference List

Abdullahi, M. (2001) Culture and customs of Somalia. London: Greenwood Press.

Abdullahi, A. (2017) Making sense of Somali history. London: Adonis and Abbey.

Anderson, D., Beckerley, S., Hailu, D., and Klein, A. (2007) The khat controversy: Stimulating the debate on drugs. Oxford: Berg.

Bauman, Z. (2000) Liquid modernity. Cambridge: Polity.

Bauman, Z. (2006) Liquid times: Living in an age of uncertainty. Cambridge: Polity.

Blackshaw, T. (2016) Re-imagining leisure studies. London: Taylor & Francis.

Blackshaw, T. (2018) The two rival concepts of devotional leisure: Towards an understanding of twenty-first-century human creativity and the possibility of freedom. International Journal of the Sociology of Leisure. 1(1): 75–97.

Fangen, K. (2006) Humiliation experienced by Somali refugees in Norway. Journal of Refugee Studies. 19(1): 69–93.

Kalix, P. (1987) Khat: Scientific knowledge and policy issues. British Journal of Addiction. 82(1): 47–53.

Markussen, M. (2018) ‘Nobody comes to baba for advice’: Negotiating ageing masculinities in the Somali diaspora. Journal of Ethnic and Migration Studies. 46(7): 1442–1459.

Swain, S. (2017a) The khat controversy: Dark leisure in a liquid modern world. Annals of Leisure Research. 20(5): 610–625.

Swain, S. (2017b) Leisure in the current interregnum: Exploring the social theories of Anthony Giddens and Zygmunt Bauman. In Spracklen, K., Lashua, B., Sharpe, E., and Swain, S. (eds.) Palgrave Handbook of Leisure Theory. Basingstoke: Palgrave, 799–816.

Swain, S. (2019) Sport, power and politics: Exploring sport and social control within the changing context of modernity. International Journal of the Sociology of Leisure. 2(4), 385–402.

Swain, S., (2021) Voices from the margins: Khat-chewing, devotional leisure and ambivalence in the British-Somali diaspora. In: De Martini-Ugolotti, Nicola and Caudwell, Jayne, (eds.) Leisure and forced migration: Reframing critical analysis of lives lived in the asylum system. London, Routledge. 139-154.

Swain, S., Spracklen, K., and Lashua, B. (2018) Khat-chewing in liminal leisure spaces: British-Somali youth on the margins. Leisure Studies. 37(4), 440–451.

Swain, S., Lashua, B. & Spracklen, K. (2021) Khat-chewing, Moral Spacing and Belonging: Sociological Insights into the Cultural Space of the mafrish in the Leisure Lives of Older and Middle-aged British-Somali Males. International Journal of the Sociology of Leisure. 4 (1):1–22.